

September, 2018 Beauty Spot of the Month

This September the Country Hills Garden Club has chosen the attractive landscape at the Clukey house at 10105 Cornwall Road as the Beauty Spot of the Month. The curb appeal of this ranch-style house is enhanced by a blend of trees, shrubs, flowers, and garden accents of complementary scale. At the front wall of the house is a row of alternating azalea and rhododendron shrubs. During this late summer season, visual excitement comes at the row's end where fuchsia pink blossoms cover a tall, bushy crepe myrtle. A pretty grapevine wreath attached to the brick wall brings a touch of country charm to the landscape. Two ornamental cherry trees, different in size and shape, are prominently positioned in the foreground. One with weeping branches serves as the focal point in the right side yard. To the left, an upright cherry tree shades a wide flower bed. Purple petunias and red and white impatiens spread over the dark mulch with their funnel-shaped flowers turned toward the afternoon sun. Long stemmed pastel roses grow nearby as their companion plants. Across the landscape, summer-themed garden stakes, flags, and flower baskets extend a cheery welcome to visitors. When you stop to admire this CCH yard, don't be surprised if you catch sight of a fluttering hummingbird or butterfly!
