

November, 2017 Beauty Spot of the Month

Congratulations to Carol Parry who lives at 3414 Park Hill Place! The Country Hills Garden Club has selected her front yard as the November Beauty Spot of the Month. The mature plantings surrounding her home accent its architectural design and add beautiful seasonal colors to its landscape scheme.

The attractive gazing ball placed at the top of the driveway reflects the beauty found in the Parry yard. A mix of evergreen and deciduous trees and shrubs creates the year-round curb appeal. At the front of the house, a thick, pruned hedge of azalea bushes complements the horizontal lines of the windows and brick wall. In contrast, a tall crepe myrtle and a holly freely grow toward the eaves at the wall corners. A stately arborvitae flanked by yew bushes highlights the distinctive picture window centered on the side addition. Hostas and azaleas are well-suited as companion plants in the shaded flower gardens close to the main entrance.

In November the colorful displays of ornamentals in the yard signal a change of seasons. At the driveway, fragile white summer flowers of a nandina bush have produced spectacular sprays of crimson berries. Along the side yard, dried hydrangea blossoms are edged with a dusty rose tint while dogwood branches show off their rich burgundy leaves and cherry-red fruit clusters. A floral arrangement of potted chrysanthemums and a pumpkin brings a festive touch to the front doorstep.

This month stroll through the CCH neighborhood for thrilling views of fall foliage! Be sure to stop at the Parry address to admire the impressive landscape enhanced by autumn's awesome special effects.
