

Buyers Are Talking About Country Club Hills

That's the location of these modern split-level "Homes of '54" designed by architect Richard Parli and built by Stafford Builders, Inc. These houses adjoin the Fairfax Country Club in Fairfax Va. and are designed for maximum indoor-outdoor living. The homes feature all-brick construction, living room with raised hearth, separate dining room and General Electric kitchen. Other qualities of the homes include a window wall ranging the entire rear of the house, full daylight basement with fireplace and hot-water baseboard heat. Price of the houses range from $17,950 to $19,700 and veterans may purchase the homes for $700 down. Present residents of Country Club Hills are planning to construct a swimming pool for community use in the near future. The model Country Club Hills home is located at 110 Country Hill drive and is completely furnished by the Barnes and Kimel Co.